CARISSA GIBLIN

Carissa Giblin has 20 years of experience in technical and production workplaces in roles of manager, consultant and individual contributor. She has a unique outlook on the impact of leadership during times of change. Starting as a college graduate, Carissa had the opportunity to supervise a crew for a 24 hour production operation and began observing others' leadership styles. After a decade of managing roles, she honed influencing skills (since sans the authoritative title) across multiple departments. Her internal consultant role connected all past experiences to where she can now see through the lenses at various levels in an organization.

Carissa earned her Bachelors in Chemical Engineering and Masters in Business Administration and didn't stop there. She is a certified Process Master, Six Sigma Green Belt, and graduate of Dale Carnegie's Leadership program. She is a practicing follower of Stephen Covey's 7 Habits of Highly Effective People and Kerry Patterson's Crucial Conversations and Influencer teachings.

Carissa is most proud of her ability to coach others to success in business and personal lives. Her current role has blossomed out of years of formal and informal mentoring and influencing relationships and she is excited to support others in realizing their potential as leaders and influencers in all aspects of life.
